"Tom Jones" Well Received

The nights of Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12, 1966 will long be remembered in the minds of show-goers of Grayling and the surrounding area, for those were the nights the Viking Drama Club presented the play "Tom Jones". Both performances hosted near capacity audiences who sat mystified as 18th century England and the story of the founding Tom Jones unfolded before their eyes, as told by Dane Madsen who played the part of Partridge.

Tom Jones, whose life story forms the basis for the play, was excellently portrayed by Mike Worden. Sharing the spotlight with him was Mary Gardiner as Sophia, the one and only love of Tom. Tom Jones, whose birth seems to be a mystery becomes the ward of Squire Allworthy (Steve DuBois) who owns an estate in Somersetshire, England. Sophia's father, Mr. Westrum (Doug Wilson) owns an adjoining estate.

Characterizations in the play were most excellently done, the most outstanding of which was Highwayman, as played by Larry Deary. During both performances, production was interrupted by sincere applause as the sinister "Black Shadow" resolves to give up his occupation after only one try. The audience was also humorously impressed with the Jekyll and Hyde antics of Blifil as played by Fenn Welch. The wild actions of Fitzpatrick (Tom Hatfield), a rough Irishman, added much color and excitement to the performance.

Viewing the performance totally, all parts were excellently cast and the production clearly portrayed the devotion and sincerity of the actors to present to their audience a first rate production.

Much of the success of the show must go to the stage crew and the efficient use of staging facilities. The audience seemed to shift mentally with a great deal of ease from Somersetshire, to a roadside, to the Inn at Upton, and to London. Scene changes were facilitated through the use of the newly purchased spotlight which was used to isolate scenes and smooth the transition of the performance.

Between the acts, four lovely ladies favored the audiences with several vocal selections that were typical of the period of the play.

The only incidents which marred this first production of the season did not occur on the stage, but rather in the audience. Although, Pat Thompson, Jim Weaver and Doug Wilson.

Following is the 17 game schedule of the Vikings for this season:

- Nov. 29 — Roscommon
- Dec. 2 — Gaylord
- Dec. 9 — Charlevoix
- Dec. 13 — Harbor Springs
- Dec. 16 — East Jordan

Supreme Court Rules For General McDonald

On Monday of this week, the Michigan Supreme Court ruled that Major General Ronald D. McDonald could appeal his ouster as the Adjutant General of Michigan in the courts.

The high court granted McDonald leave to appeal an unfavorable Court of Appeals ruling on his challenge of Gov. Romney's right to dismiss him from the state military post and the right of Maj. Gen. Clarence Schnipke to serve in McDonald's place.

The Supreme Court order was signed by Chief Justice Thomas Kavanagh. Justice Theodore Souris dissented and Justices Paul Adams and John Dethmers did not participate.

McDonald, working for a Lansing lithograph firm, continues as an unassigned major general in the Michigan National Guard.

His appeal requires Schnipke to show by what right he now holds the adjutant general's post and asks for a writ declaring the ousted officer "the lawful and rightful adjutant . . . in all respects entitled to hold and occupy that office."

It asks the court to find Schnipke's appointment "void and of no effect . . . and ousting and excluding the defendant from that office."

Schnipke was appointed to fill the adjutant's post July 23, 1965. Romney had removed McDonald May 20, 1965, after a 93-hour hearing into alleged irregularities in the Michigan military establishment.

Bear '67 Catalog Heralds Archery Innovations

"Never before so many innovations in one year!" states the opening headline of the 1967 Bear Archery Company catalog.

The new 32-page booklet, illustrated with distinctive full-color artwork, features the all-new Bear target and tournament line of bows. New and exclusive with Bear bows this year is an action core of cross laminated wood, which gives increased strength and greater flexibility; quick connects built right into most tournament bows for use of the new Bear Inertial Stabilizers; and a new 72-inch length in the two top-of-the-line Bear tournament bows.

These improvements join a long list of Bear firsts chronicled in the catalog including the first completely fiberglass powered bows, first bows to use high compression materials, and the first bowsight to become an integral part of the bow's design.

Redesigned bows featured in the catalog include the HC-30, Tamerlane, Kodiak Special, Polar, Alaskan, Bearcat and Tigercat.

Fred Bear's advice on progressive outfitting is included, as is the exclusive Bear Transferable Warranty.

Protective Codes Are A Part Of Planning

By Willard Bosserman
 Co. Ext. Natural Resource Agent

Community planning committees have a tough decision to make. They have to strike a balance between the increase in property values brought about by building on lakes or stream shores and the deterioration of the lakes that such building might cause. They must ponder whether buildings should be built on soil not well adapted to building, when other sites are available but not as well situated to a body of water.

They must decide whether low swampy areas are left for natural reservoirs or filled in for building sites.

Upon these decisions determine to a great extent whether a lake, river or community progresses or degenerates.

The decisions are particularly difficult because all too often individual rights, desires and privileges must give way to what is best for the whole community.

As air pollution, water pollution and soil pollution, problems become greater and as the population becomes more dense, the rights that we have always taken for granted must be relinquished for the good of all.

This is not new in America. During World War II, as did many other Americans, gave up many individual freedoms to fight a great war. Some Americans are still being asked to do this.

Industries are being asked to give up their freedom to belch smoke into the atmosphere for the good of the whole community. Communities are being forced to give up the freedom of dumping wastes into the river.

So it will be with individual property owners, they may be asked to limit the use of their property so it will not infringe on the rights of their neighbors. There is an old saying, "My rights end where your rights begin".

Protective codes (zoning ordinances) are written to implement a sound planning program.

F. H. A. SERVES LOCAL AREA

The Grayling Housing Commission is designed to influence the orderly growth of our community. Lora Gould, its managing Director said today. The scope of our service reaches beyond the administration of public housing projects which may come up for consideration from time to time.

For example, local citizens needing FHA Insured Mortgages for their own purposes, are invited to bring their inquiries to the Housing Commission; if they cannot be properly served by other local institutions.

We do not arrange FHA cases ourselves, but we can keep in our files the names of people who do.

FHA Insured Mortgage Loans can be useful to local folks in several ways, such as buying an existing house, selling an existing house, building a new home, or developing raw land into a subdivision.

Sometimes, local banks who might wish to serve their town by handling FHA cases, are unable to do so for reasons that are beyond their control. When this occurs, other arrangements must be found to do the job, and this is when our file might be useful.

Interested persons are invited to come in and learn the identities of these specialists in the field, who become known to us from time to time.

The Grayling Housing Commission is headquartered at City Hall, phone number is 348-9314.

China's Purge?

With the United States already heavily committed in an Asian jungle war, Americans have been more than normally curious about the purge in communist China and how it might affect the future course of world events. It now appears that the upheaval, which was first believed an interparty struggle to succeed China's aging Mao Tse-tung, is actually what Red propaganda sources have called it—a revolution. But, the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution," as the Reds call it, is designed to strengthen, rather than weaken, the ruling ideology. Newsweek magazine has termed it a "purification campaign" to remove everything from Chinese society which does not reflect the teachings of Chairman Mao.

The purge has seen the toppling of high-ranking party officials, the closing of schools and universities for curriculum revision and the formation of the teen-age organization called the Red Guard, which has supplied the manpower for the militant attacks on anything and everything that smacks of comfort, sophistication, foreign influence or traditional Chinese culture. Most of these developments can be attributed to the fanatic character of Mao Tse-tung and his chief lieutenant and likely successor, Lin Biao. But, the why of it all has western observers puzzled, since there appears to be no real threat to the Mao regime.

Time magazine suggests China's aging oligarchy is pathologically worried about the state of its own revolution.

olution: "Seventeen years in power have not won for Mao the ultimate goals he strives for. Yet, by all accounts, the Chinese people are sick of struggle and ready to settle for a less-than-glittering future. Mao Tse-tung sees in Russia the seeds of his own downfall: a Red revolution that shows signs of evolving into a bourgeois society. To an old fighter whose victories were forged in hardship, it is an utterly unacceptable prospect. Hence the current Chinese purge," and the sino-Soviet split.

Other theories suggest the purge is a buildup to an announcement that harvests fell short, thanks to the old demons of drought in the north and flood in the south, and a new economic program will be launched. Reports that party editorials have begun using the phrase "New Leap" recalls memory of Mao's 1958 Great Leap Forward, which was such a flop it set China's economy back several years.

Whatever the reason for the revolution, and the fears and ambitions of its leadership, China still remains true to its international objectives, of which Time magazine explains there are four: "1) to lessen U. S. power and prestige in Asia and thereby reduce American pressure on China, 2) to forge a new and militant Communist bloc with Peking as its leader, 3) to become the dominant power in Asian affairs and thereby one of the world's three great powers (along with the U. S. and Russia), 4) to prove that wars of liberation can be fought victoriously anywhere."

To the western mind, many aspects of China's current political upheaval seem irrational. Irrational behavior in conducting internal affairs causes some to wonder if the same unpredictability and violence might show up in China's dealings with other nations. In modern weaponry and productive capability, China's military power is insignificant, but her manpower is great. Any daring attempts to use it in building Chinese prestige in the Orient could involve the Soviet Union and quickly threaten the world again with the finality of World War III. On the other hand, the present disorder in China could be the death rattle of the old, hard-line communist revolution, personified by Mao Tse-tung. This could presage warmer relations between the Soviet Union and China. Either way, the United States, which has undertaken the task of defending the world from the rampages of Red-inspired revolutions, must be prepared to anticipate and meet whatever pressure the Red Chinese purge may exert on the course of events.

Light snowfall over the last of the weekend prepared an ideal setting for the deer hunting season. Tracking was just right and it only remained for Monday morning to start the hunt in earnest. By that time Northern Michigan was entertaining just about as large an army of deer hunters as it had ever had. Bright and early Monday morning the down town streets of the city were just about deserted of autos. The hunters were out on the trails getting the thrills they had been planning for. A few filled their licenses early the first day and general reports are that but few deer were killed near Grayling, at least by local hunters. However, by as early as 8 a. m. some cars were seen on the streets loaded with a deer on a fender and its owner wearing a broad and happy smile.

Attorney James E. Ryan is in receipt of an opinion of Circuit Judge Shaffer whereby the court cancelled an oil and gas lease on the property of C. H. Lintz and wife, owners of the South Branch Ranch. The lease was originally given for five years to E. E. Johnston of Saginaw, who erected a drilling rig but did not follow up with drilling of the well. Later Johnston assigned the lease to Dorothy Bolster, Trustee and the well was commenced but after drilling 800 feet no further drilling was done. No rentals were paid to the Lintzs after the derrick was erected. It was practically admitted that the lease was in default but they claimed the Lintzs had signed a waiver. The court held there was no consideration for the waiver, and held same void. This opinion releases some 1300 acres from the lease.

Letters To The Editor

Editor's Note: Another glimpse of John Stephan's adventures in Alaska. Written September 4, 1966 to his parents.

Dear Ones;

While letting the cranberry sauce cool and the sour dough bread rise I will send off these few lines.

Jeffery must be pretty well settled back to civilization and school by now. I enjoyed his company.

The last notable experience we had together was that of a long awaited mountain climb. It seems there was always something that foiled our climbing plans. If not necessary business then the weather kept us grounded on the lower levels of our local Mother Earth.

But, finally the weather broke to the better at a convenient time to take off from work.

There was a low lying fog that covered the area the morning we decided to go, but we were confident it would be a nice day. Quite often the nicer days start off with an early morning fog, so at about 5:00 a. m. we started out. We had about a fifteen mile drive to the foot of the Kenai Mountain Range and by the time we got to the foothills patches of blue sky were appearing in the pass between the two walls of green. Now and then we would catch a glimpse of our brown and grey goal far above the timber line.

From a predetermined starting point along the highway we started up the 45° timber covered slope. The wild cranberries covering that portion of the slope made the ground appear red for their abundance. Jeff and I nibbled on a few of these sour little berries as we went on up.

The underbrush was thick and the sun had not dried the dew from it yet so before long we were soaked up to our waists. Jeff was surprised at the size of some of the trees which grew there on the mountain as they look much smaller from the road. One birch tree was about 3 ft. at the stump and many spruce larger. We struggled on up through the Devil's Club (bushes with long spines) and alders until we reached the timber line. From there on up the going was good except for the steep climb.

Now we were into the few remaining clouds which sailed by us in an easy manner and the smell of rain drew our attention to them. However, it was a beautiful warm day by then and we were about dry.

One cannot describe the beauty of the lakes and forests which lay before us in magnificent testimony of God's creation.

We had about reached our goal when our stomachs told us it was past lunch time. Actually, it was only 11:30, but we sat in the lee of the wind and enjoyed the sun, scenery and lunch.

After lunch Jeff's first ambition was to roll a few holders down the slope and slide areas. Since I could see the area where the rocks would be tumbling I told him it would be safe to mudge a few over the edge of the ridge. Most of the rocks would only make a quarter of a mile before they would be broken into small fragments from dashing onto embedded rocks as they bounded and sped down toward timber line. Only one or two holders made it all the way to the first growth of alders. This became quite fascinating and since there was no chance of starting a slide we 'mountain bowled' for about an hour as we climbed on up to the highest place in that particular area.

As we were coming back to a point where we left our pack we stopped and were resting a bit when way off on another slope I could see several white specks which I suspected to be mountain goats, so I drew Jeff's attention to them and then we saw one move proving that they weren't rocks.

The spotting of these white animals was the beginning of an interesting stalk. Rifle or binoculars were not a part of our pack. The only weapon was Jeff's brownie camera that his sister Gail Ann had lent him for the trip north. With that in hand Jeff and I planned our course of stalk and headed for what we thought were mountain goats.

(To be continued next week)

When a man gives thanks he is recognizing how small a part he himself has contributed to this world's abundance.

When a man gives thanks he is expressing his affection for and his dependence on those who constantly share the experiences of his life.

When a man gives thanks he is laying aside his discontentments to rejoice in the more numerous and more meaningful satisfactions that have marked each passing day.

When a man gives thanks he is escaping from the webs of pride, greed and self-addition that could otherwise imprison his soul.

When a man gives thanks he is meeting God on God's own ground. For God is God! And we are His children.

When a man gives thanks he is discovering his greater need. For all that God has provided is but the threshold to all that God promises.

V. F. W. NEWS

by signing up members for the Post also.

We have a committee now who are trying to get some things going so that we can get our Post Colors. So if any of you comrades can come in and give a helping hand, I know that it would be appreciated. How about it fellows. Remember our Post, it takes more than two or three of us to keep this going and we all are looking for your help on the various subjects that come up, so please come on in.

At the last meeting only seven of us showed our faces and also at that time we had some visitors, those attending our last meeting were as follows: Harold Small, 11th District Comm. Shepherd Post 8215; Lawrence Myers, 11th District Chief of Staff, Midland Post 3651; John Sweebs, Sr. Vice Comm. Mt. Pleasant Post 3033; Calvin Knowles, Lansing Post 6132; Merle E. Hopper, Midland Post 3651. Comrades the 11th District is in first place on their membership drive, what do you say that we try to build it up so that no other District can catch up to us. We are part of the District and it is up to us to do our fair share. We need another 100 members by the end of the month at least to stay in first, so let us try to help. There are a lot of Veterans in this County, and we should be able to have a larger group than we now have, so let us all see what we can do to build our Post up.

Our 1967 dues can be paid any time now, we have only 9 members who have their 67 dues paid, and I think that with a little effort we could do better than we are. Our next meeting will be on December 14 at 8 p. m. at the American Legion Hall. I am asking each of you to PLEASE try to attend our meetings then all will know just what we are trying to do. Thank you, William Higbee Post Commander.

When you love your work, it shows.

And we love our work. So much that we couldn't bear to stop with the slickest-looking split grille ever to grace a Wide-Track. (Or any other car, for that matter.)

We went ahead and made the windshield wipers disappear. The car not only looks cleaner, but the wipers are less subject to icing and freezing, too.

Then we got rid of the vent windows on all Grand Prix hard-tops. We replaced them with nifty monograms and a flow-through ventilation system.

We even designed a rather unique hood-mounted tachometer option that's available on all Pontiacs. As are our other new options like stereo tape and stereo radio.

And, of course, our handsome interiors have to be seen to be believed.

All Pontiacs have standard safety features that include a dual master cylinder brake system with warning light, outside rear-view mirror, and GM's energy absorbing steering column.

Isn't it time you decided to see your Pontiac dealer? If you love our work the way we do, it's the least you can do.
